1 Time Evaluation

In every step of the process we have atleast spent 10 minutes implementing changes and then come back to the users for comments. This have atleast taken us 1,5 hours to do. Fulfilling the course requirement of the pre-user evaluation of the prototype.

2 Gabriel

One of our friends from Stockholm university, an avid anime fan. He likes to watch anime from time to time and hangout with us to play random games.

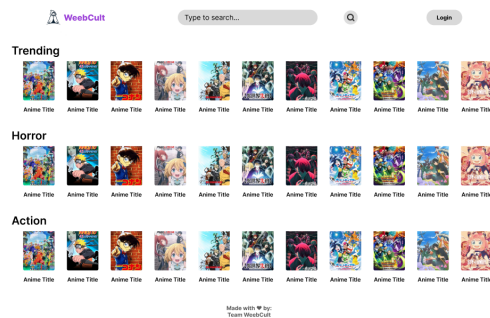

(a) Initial design, based on drawings we made

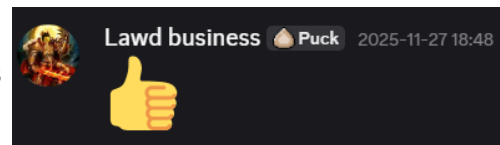

(b) Changes suggested: making the images bigger, make icons bigger and have a 2-3 rows (too repetitive otherwise)

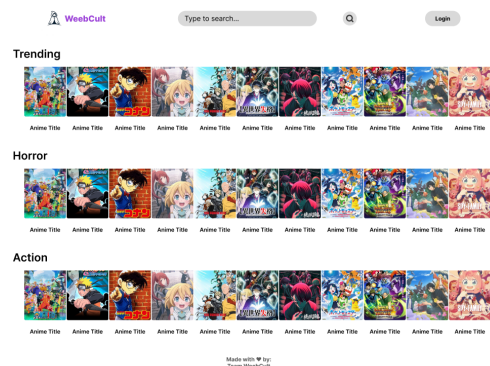

(c) Changes suggested: but keeping the proportions between the horizontal genre rows the same

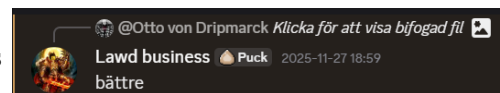

(a) Changes made: limited the amount of rows, made images slightly bigger, but decreased the distance between genre rows

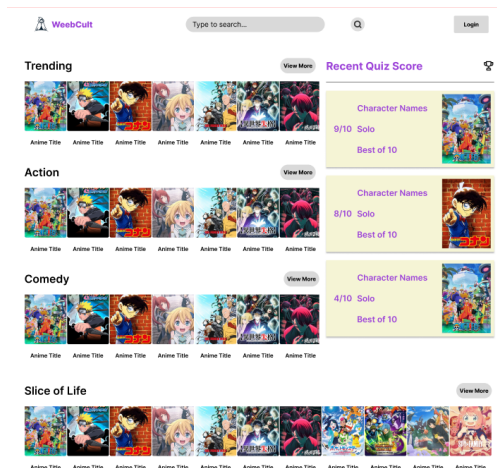

(b) Thumbs up, what more can we say

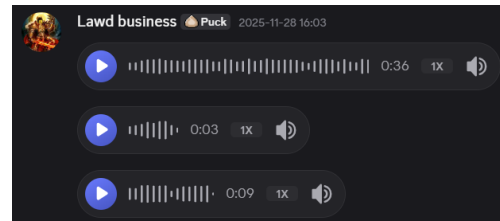

(a) Changes made: made the images even bigger and decreased the distance between the anime portraits

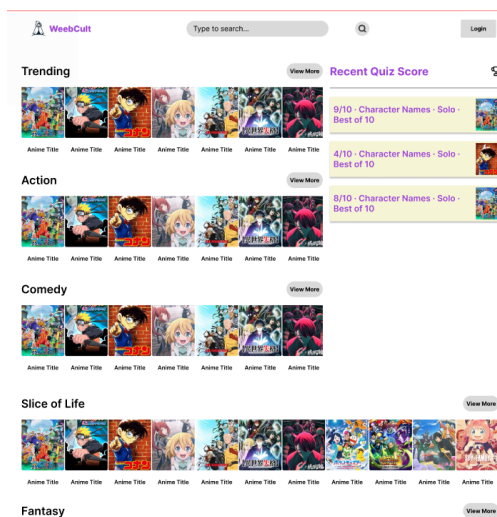

(b) Comment: Better :)

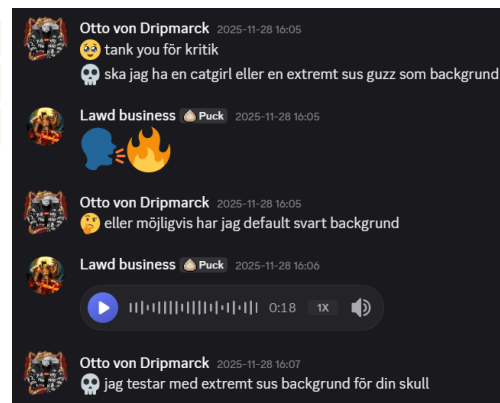

(a) Changes made: added a vertical bar, which stores recent quiz scores

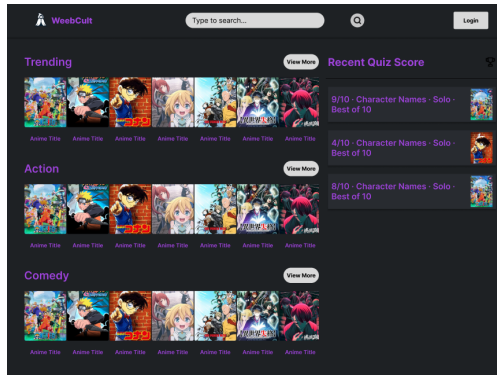

(b) Remove a third of the recent quiz size". "At slice of life, cut it vertically at the recent quiz section, in the space left place ads, otherwise the site wouldn't be suspiciouis enough". "Choose a funny image for the background"

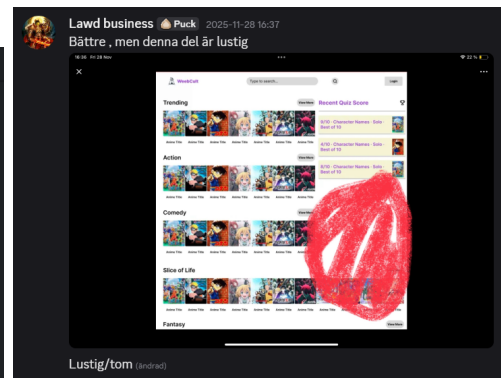

(a) Changes made: decreased the size of the cards in the recent quiz section

(b) "Test adding extremly sus back-ground when you play, or have as de-fault Discord gray background"

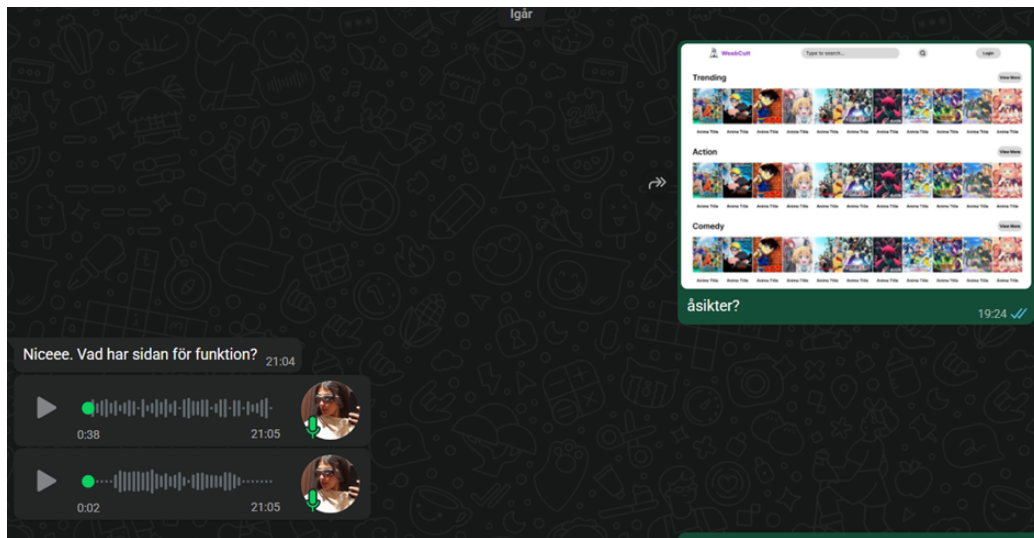

(a) Changes made: added a gray back-ground/colour theme that is similar to discord

(b) Comment: Better, but the empty space that is left is suspicious". A suggestion from him was that we could add a tab for website updates/news

3 Sister

We asked a group members sister for critique for critique, she also likes to watch anime. She is also an artist and has a master in art and film studies (in other words good taste):

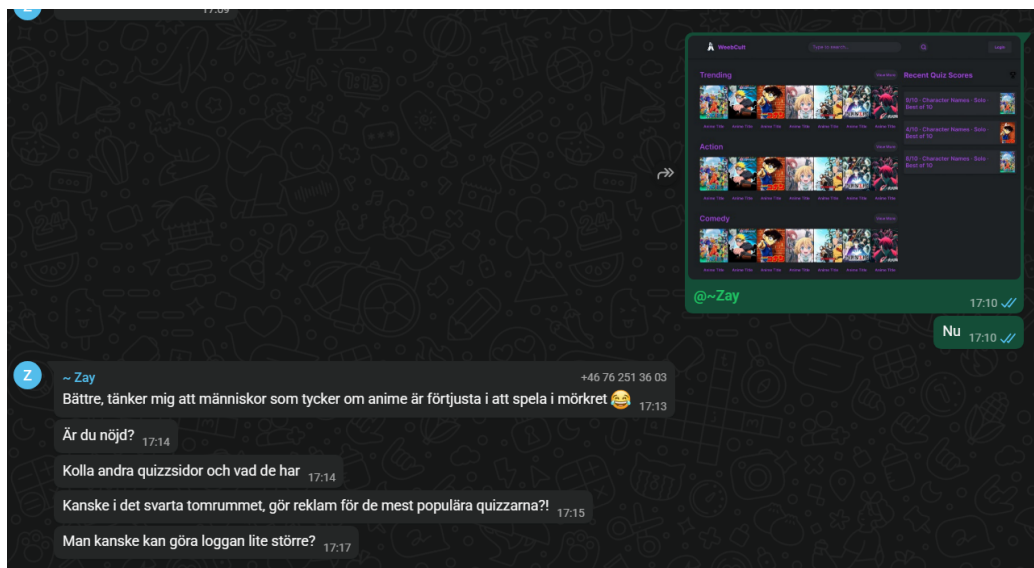

Figur 7: In the voice message she said that there is another needed element in the website, as 3 elements in a picture is a good number if you want an interesting image. She counted the top bar as an element and the horizontal rows as the second element. She recommended that we should add a vertical row to left or right, as the third element. Otherwise: "it would look like a russian streaming site". Otherwise she thought it looked good.

4 Sister 2

We asked the other sister for critique, she is a teacher in high school, but likes to watch anime a lot, here is what she recommended:

Figur 8: Comments: she liked the recent quiz score, as it broke the horizontal lines. She said that the white background looked to "clinical", so something like a header might fix it. Otherwise, she liked the genre divisions and the search bar.

Figur 9: Comments: Better, we think people that like to watch anime, like to play in the dark. She also asked if we are satisfied (which at that point, we where). She also recommended to look at other quiz websites and see what we can take from them. Another suggestion for adding ads or atleast having the most popular quizzes in that part. Maybe making the logo a little bigger.
